A restoration ecologist studies how to restore species that have experienced significant population declines. These declines are often caused by nonnative insects or diseases and/or ecosystem damages from human activities.

Dr. Leila Pinchot
Restoration Ecologist
Ph.D., University of Tennessee
USDA Forest Service scientist

http://www.naturalinquirer.org